

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

To all ICEF graduates 2020 and 2021,

As Vice-Chancellor of the University of London, I offer my warmest congratulations to all of our graduands at the International College of Economics and Finance on your academic success, which are the culmination of years of dedication and hard work.

The circumstances of the past 18 months have challenged all of us; and I know very well the additional focus, skill and determination that have enabled you to achieve your world-class degree with the University of London despite the obstacles. Which is why I'm delighted to send you this message, and to be there in spirit with our friends and colleagues at ICEF, where I know you have received such excellent academic and practical support. Your graduation is something that you should feel very proud of, and today we share that pride in your achievement with you. But, of course, it is only part of your story.

Your degree opens up a world of possibilities and opportunities, and today you join more than 2,500 alumni who have graduated from ICEF over the past 21 years, who are now working or studying in Russia or more than 40 countries across the world. This includes graduates who have gone on to work for companies including household names such as PWC, Deloitte, Google, IBM, or to further their academic studies at world-leading institutions including the LSE, as well as top universities in the USA.

You also join the hundreds of thousands of University of London graduates who are making incredible contributions for the benefit of society in a range of fields of expertise around the world, helping to tackle today's most pressing global challenges. Please do stay in touch with us, along with hundreds of thousands of our alumni all over the world – an unparalleled and dynamic network to which I hope you will contribute in the years ahead.

Have belief in yourselves, and as you face the future remember how strong you have all had to be, and all you have learned, to be here today. You are ready for anything.

Many congratulations from all of us at the University of London, and very best wishes for the future.

Много поздравлений!
